1. Delivery areas, service levels, and charges

Kigali delivery area. Standard delivery is available within the three districts of Kigali City. The store confirms whether an address is inside the standard zone using the customer location and an accessible landmark.

Outside Kigali. Delivery to other districts may be arranged through an approved transporter. Price and timing depend on distance, road access, product size, and whether a return trip is required.

Standard timing. In-stock orders confirmed before 2:00 PM normally arrive within 1 to 2 business days in Kigali. Orders confirmed later begin processing on the next business day.

Large appliances. Refrigerators, washing machines, and large televisions require a scheduled delivery window and confirmation that the building, stairs, doorway, and installation location are accessible.

Charges. Delivery fees depend on zone and product size. The fee is displayed or communicated before payment. Additional charges require customer approval before dispatch.

Free-delivery promotions. A promotion applies only to the locations, dates, minimum order, and products stated in the offer. Extra services such as difficult access or outside-Kigali transport may remain chargeable.

Example: An in-stock blender ordered in Kigali on Monday morning normally arrives by Wednesday. Delivery outside Kigali requires a separate quote.

2. Order confirmation and preparation

Order confirmation. Delivery starts after Kigali HomeTech confirms the product, quantity, price, delivery fee, payment status, customer phone number, and destination.

Address information. Customers should provide district, sector, cell or neighbourhood, street or landmark, map pin when available, recipient name, and two working phone numbers.

Stock allocation. A product is reserved only after the required payment or approved deposit. If stock changes before confirmation, staff offer an alternative product, revised date, or refund.

Product inspection. Warehouse staff check the model, serial number, accessories, visible condition, and packaging before dispatch. Fragile items receive protective packaging.

Customer readiness. For large appliances, the customer should measure doorways, clear the delivery route, protect floors, and ensure an adult is present. The delivery team may refuse an unsafe lift or staircase.

Communication. The store sends or calls with the planned delivery date and time window. Customers should report access restrictions before dispatch.

A complete address and reachable phone number reduce failed deliveries. The chatbot should ask customers to contact support when the exact location or access conditions are uncertain.

3. Delivery, inspection, and acceptance

Arrival. The delivery team calls the recipient when approaching. The recipient may need to confirm the order number or customer name before goods are released.

Safe placement. The team places the packaged product in the agreed accessible location. Standard delivery does not include electrical work, wall mounting, plumbing, cabinet modification, or removal of doors unless separately agreed.

Customer inspection. Before signing, the customer should confirm the correct model and quantity, inspect packaging and visible surfaces, and check that listed accessories are present.

Damage or shortage. Visible damage, a missing item, or the wrong model should be written on the delivery note and photographed. The customer may refuse a seriously damaged item.

Proof of delivery. The recipient signs or confirms electronically after inspection. The record includes date, time, location, recipient, and any noted issue.

Refrigerator handling. A refrigerator should remain upright. After delivery, the customer should wait at least four hours before switching it on, following the product manual.

Signing without a note does not remove the right to report a hidden defect, but visible damage should be recorded immediately because it helps the store investigate.

4. Delays, rescheduling, and failed delivery

Possible delays. Heavy rain, road closures, vehicle problems, stock verification, security restrictions, or high order volume may affect timing. The store should communicate a revised estimate.

Customer rescheduling. A customer may request another date before dispatch without an extra fee. A late request after dispatch may involve a second delivery charge.

No recipient available. The driver waits a reasonable period and attempts to call. If nobody can receive the order, the product returns to the store and support arranges another attempt.

Incorrect address. A substantial route change may require a revised charge or new delivery date. The driver should not leave the order at an unconfirmed address.

Unsafe access. The team may stop a delivery if stairs, balconies, narrow passages, animals, construction, or weather create a risk. Support works with the customer on a safer plan.

Cancellation. If the customer cancels before dispatch, normal refund rules apply. After dispatch, reasonable transport costs may be deducted unless cancellation resulted from a store error.

Customers should contact support as soon as plans change. Early rescheduling protects the product and avoids unnecessary transport costs.

5. Installation, damage claims, payment, and support

Installation services. Installation is included only when the invoice specifically lists it. Electrical, plumbing, gas, antenna, or wall-mount work must be completed by a qualified person.

Damage discovered later. Hidden transport damage should be reported within 48 hours with the order number, photos, packaging condition, and description. The customer should stop using an unsafe product.

Payment methods. The store accepts cash at the store, mobile money, bank cards, and approved bank transfers. Some orders require full payment before dispatch. Drivers accept payment only when the invoice explicitly allows payment on delivery.

Delivery refunds. The delivery fee is refunded when Kigali HomeTech confirms wrong supply, damage in transit, or inability to deliver for reasons controlled by the store. Change-of-mind cancellations may not include a delivery-fee refund.

Packaging. Customers should keep packaging until they confirm the product works. Packaging supports safe return transport but is not always required for a valid defect claim.

Support information. Customers should quote the order number when asking about delivery. The store can explain status, but it verifies identity before changing an address, recipient, or payment instruction.

Delivery summary: confirm the order and address, prepare and inspect the product, communicate the schedule, record acceptance, and report problems quickly.
