1. Purpose, scope, and customer rights

Purpose. This policy explains when Kigali HomeTech Store accepts a return, what the customer must provide, and how the store completes a refund or exchange. It applies to products purchased in the store, through the store website, or through an approved sales representative.

Standard return period. An eligible product may be returned within 30 calendar days from the purchase or delivery date, whichever is later. Day one is the day after purchase or confirmed delivery. If day 30 falls on a day when the store is closed, the customer may return the item on the next opening day.

Proof of purchase. The customer should present a receipt, tax invoice, mobile-money confirmation, card receipt, or online order confirmation. If the receipt is missing, staff may search for the transaction using the customer name, phone number, date, and payment reference. A transaction that cannot be verified may be declined.

Condition of the product. The product should be clean, safe to handle, and complete. The original box is helpful but not always required. Essential accessories, manuals, remote controls, power cables, and promotional items supplied with the product must be returned.

Fair use. Customers may open packaging to inspect a product. Signs of normal inspection do not automatically make a product ineligible. Heavy use, physical damage, missing parts, or use that reduces resale value may lead to a partial refund or refusal.

Example: A customer who bought a blender 14 days ago and has proof of purchase is within the 30-day return period. Staff must still inspect the blender, jug, lid, cable, and accessories.

2. Eligibility by product condition

Unopened products. An unopened product in its original condition normally qualifies for return within 30 days. Security seals and serial-number labels must match the sales record.

Opened products. An opened product may qualify when it is complete, clean, and undamaged. Staff may test the product to confirm its condition. A product used beyond reasonable inspection may receive a reduced refund based on missing packaging, scratches, or wear.

Defective products. If a product is faulty on arrival or develops a confirmed manufacturing fault within the return period, the customer may request a replacement, refund, or warranty assessment. Staff should record the reported fault and testing result.

Wrong item supplied. When Kigali HomeTech delivers the wrong model, colour, capacity, or quantity, the store will arrange correction without an additional delivery charge. The customer should report the problem within 48 hours after delivery.

Bundle purchases. Products sold as a bundle should normally be returned together. If the customer keeps part of the bundle, the refund will be recalculated using the normal selling price of the retained item.

Gifts. A gift recipient may exchange an eligible product using a gift receipt or verified order number. Cash refunds go to the original purchaser through the original payment method.

Eligibility depends on time, proof of purchase, product condition, completeness, and any product-specific restriction. A chatbot should mention these conditions instead of giving only a yes-or-no answer.

3. Products with restrictions or exclusions

Health and hygiene products. Earphones, grooming devices, and other products that directly contact the body cannot be returned after use unless they are defective. Unopened products remain eligible within the standard period.

Digital products. Activated software licences, digital subscriptions, downloadable products, and redeemed vouchers cannot be returned because the access code has already been used.

Custom orders. Special-order products, custom installations, and products modified at the customer request cannot be returned for change of mind. This exclusion does not remove the customer right to report a defect or incorrect supply.

Clearance items. An item clearly marked final sale cannot be returned for change of mind. If the item has an undisclosed fault, staff will assess it under the warranty and defective-product rules.

Damage caused after purchase. Returns do not cover damage caused by dropping, liquid, misuse, incorrect voltage, blocked ventilation, pests, unauthorized repair, or failure to follow the manual. Staff may refer such cases for paid repair.

Large appliances. Refrigerators, washing machines, and televisions may require an inspection at the customer location before collection. Customers should not transport a damaged large appliance unless support staff advise them to do so.

A restriction should always include its exception. For example, a final-sale item cannot be returned for change of mind, but an undisclosed manufacturing defect can still be assessed.

4. Return process, inspection, and decisions

Step 1 - Contact the store. The customer may visit the service desk or contact support with the order number, product name, purchase date, reason for return, and photographs when damage is visible.

Step 2 - Product intake. Staff record the serial number, accessories, physical condition, and customer request. The customer receives a return reference number. Large appliances may be inspected at the delivery address.

Step 3 - Assessment. Staff compare the item with the sales record and test basic operation where safe. A straightforward unopened return may be approved immediately. A suspected technical fault may require a technician and normally takes up to five business days.

Step 4 - Decision. The store may approve a full refund, partial refund, exchange, repair assessment, or rejection. When a return is rejected, staff explain the reason and identify the relevant policy condition.

Customer data. Staff collect only the information needed to locate the sale and manage the return. Copies of identity documents should not be taken unless required for fraud prevention or a regulated payment reversal.

Escalation. A customer who disagrees with the decision may request review by the customer-service supervisor. The supervisor reviews the transaction record, photographs, inspection notes, and policy before responding.

The return reference number connects the customer, product, inspection result, and final decision. It should appear in staff records but should not expose private customer information in chatbot answers.

5. Refunds, exchanges, delivery costs, and examples

Refund method. Approved refunds normally use the original payment method. Mobile-money and card refunds may take 1 to 3 business days after approval. Bank-transfer refunds may take up to 5 business days. Cash refunds follow store cash-control limits.

Exchanges. A customer may exchange an eligible product for another product. If the replacement costs more, the customer pays the difference. If it costs less, the balance is refunded through the original payment method.

Delivery charges. The original standard delivery fee is refunded when Kigali HomeTech supplied the wrong item or confirmed a defect on arrival. Delivery charges are normally not refunded when the customer simply changes their mind. A new collection fee may apply outside the standard Kigali delivery area.

Promotions and gifts. Free gifts linked to a purchase must be returned, or their advertised value may be deducted from the refund. Loyalty points earned from the returned purchase will be removed.

Example - blender. A blender returned after 14 days with proof of purchase, all accessories, and no misuse qualifies for inspection. If approved, the customer may choose a refund or exchange.

Example - refrigerator. A refrigerator reported as damaged at delivery should remain at the customer location. Support arranges inspection or collection and does not charge the customer when delivery damage is confirmed.

Policy summary: eligible returns have a 30-day window, verifiable proof of purchase, acceptable condition, required accessories, and no applicable exclusion.
